

If You Could Live Within A Piece Of Art,
What Would It Look Like?

Would your own masterpiece be dramatically set in the dappled green shade of long blooming magnolias and 300-year-old live oaks draped with Spanish moss? And footed around the edges of your own art, hard green groves of saw palmettos and golden wiry marsh grasses? It could if it were a masterpiece you created.

Seas of Grass

A study in contrasting textures.

In your own pastoral, you could build your house within sight of rare swallow tail kites and snowy white egrets, white-tailed deer and gray foxes, going about their work as if you had always been there. And beyond them, through the sawgrass, you'd see the next untouched marsh, your seclusion naturally reassured.

Every figure moving within and outside the frame of your own perfect light study.

Sky Fire Portrait of a luminous sunrise.

In your own masterpiece there would be a hint of another, civilized world just out of frame. A world of more human gentility and indulgence, of manicured, championship golf courses, and elite clay tennis courts stand by, out of view but assuring. And beyond even that layer, the world outside (close but not too close) would await your emergence from sanctuary. But back inside the frame, you will have curried the acceptance of the centuries' untamed residents through careful planning and conscious underdevelopment.

Within your own Brady Point Preserve masterpiece, you fit as if you were on the canvas first and all this natural beauty were painted around you.
